NORTH WATERFORD

Beatrice Brooks from Gould's spent the week end with her roommate, Mervin Littlefield.

Clinton Nason's buildings and John Tubbs' burned Sunday morning, April 24, with very few things saved. It is thought a spark from the chimney dropped on the roof for it was a fire there when discovered. No one was living in the Tubbs house. The wind blew from the west and ran across to the latter house and across the fields, nearly to the woods. As no neighbors lived near, and no telephone, it got a good start before outsiders knew about it to help, but more help was called and worked hard to stop it. Mr. Nason and his mother lived alone.

Jesse Littlefield and family spent the week end, recently, at the farm at Bishop-town owned by Mrs. Littlefield and Mrs. Hazelton. Ezra Lebrooke and Beatrice Brooks were their guests while there.

Mrs. Sarah Parum from Norway spent the week end at Fred Hersey's, recently. Callers at Mr. Hersey's were Mrs. L. J. Andrews of Albany, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Andrews from South Paris, and Mrs. Marilla Allen and two children.

Harville Allen took dinner at Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Hazen's, recently, on his way to Lewiston.

Many are wondering who the strange man is that has traveled through this place three Sundays, within a few weeks, and what can be his business, as he has a traveling bag and a bundle under one arm.

Mona Littlefield helped Bernice Littlefield a few days last week, with her housekeeping.

Raymond Hatch is boarding with Mrs. Nellie Farmer and brother, Vivian is at his grandfather's, Ezra Lebrooke's, until their school closes, as their parents are away.

Mrs. Irvin Green conferred the 3rd and 4th degrees at Waterford Grange, Friday night, April 25. Refreshments of sandwiches, cake, cookies and orange soda were served.

SOUTH ALBANY

The rain we had Sunday, with the warm days we have been having, have given us a good start. The fields and pastures are getting green; also the buds on all kinds of trees. The poplars are showing green and the red blossoms on the maples give the forest a rich red, which contrasts well with the dark green of the pines and other evergreen trees. The birds of all kinds are back and doing their best to tell us how glad they are to be here. The cherry flowers are nearly all gone by, but in some places where the snow drifted over them, they are just coming out with the nearly white buds and will be beautiful for some time.

Walter Canwell has been saving up his big wood pile with his power saw. Preston Flint and Fred McAllister have been helping him.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cox have been visiting relatives at Wellschville.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge Bird and daughter, Ida, of North Waterford, visited at Ernest Grover's, one day last week.

Ivan Kimball is setting out some apple, peach, cherry and other kinds of trees, and also several different kinds of berries. He has some of the strawberry plants that have two crops of berries a year instead of the one-cropping variety.

Mrs. James Kimball is improving in health at present. Mrs. Kimball suffered with a bad stomach trouble some time ago, but seems to be getting better.

Susie Flint was a recent caller at Walter Canwell's.

Mrs. Willis Littlefield is at South Paris, keeping house for Mrs. Myrtle Sanborn, while she is in the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Patterson have been visiting her nephew, Chester Holt, and family. They were on their way to see Mrs. Patterson's aunt, Mrs. Ida Riggs at South Waterford, who is ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Glendon, called at Merritt Savin's Sunday morning. Glendon has a new Ford truck. He began work, Monday, on the state road in Waterford at the foot of Bear Mountain, where a big job is to be done on the road by the pond.

Ernest Grover is working on the road for Win Brown. Mr. and Mrs. Grover went to Lewiston, Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Grover will be back in town, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover went to North Fryeburg and attended the medicine show the same night. Mr. and Mrs. Willis McKee and daughter, Ava, of North Waterford, went with them.

NORWAY VICINITY

To the "Layman" who Hurled Scripture at
Simple Simon

By Courtesy of The Norway Advertiser

Dear Layman: In your zeal for prohibition you took to yourself to manhandle a letter of mine, a friendly letter, written in a kindly spirit to a lady who wanted to know why so many people are opposed to the eighteenth amendment. And because I mentioned (not to support any argument, but to state a simple fact) that Christ drank wine with his disciples, you cry out, "To think that Jesus should be classed with drunkards! It is a most revolting type of blasphemy!"

Then you go, like a mad squirrel in a cage, whirling a wheel in your own head, getting more and more excited with your self-righteousness, and reducing my common honesty to the pit of "caricatures, slanders, drunkenness and revellings," which prevent me and my kind from entering the kingdom of God. I'm glad that another Judge will settle this matter. Let me be serious, even as I smile at you twisting of texts to prove that wherever "wine" is favorably mentioned in the Bible it means fermented grape juice, and wherever "wine" is unfavorably mentioned it means fermented or alcoholic juice.

Now I know not from what pious commentator you got such a comforting delusion, but be assured, whoever he was, that he was led of the devil to proclaim a falsehood. Plainly you need a bit of elementary instruction; but before venturing to offer it perhaps I should explain—though I hate to talk of such a dry subject as myself—that I happen to know Greek, both the classic language and the dialect in which the New Testament was written. So be patient, and if possible, listen to reason.

As near as one can put the original in English, the word oinos was used for a general type, as now we use the word "wine" to signify the fermented product, and nothing else. When new or unfermented was meant it was specifically so designated by putting an adjective before the noun. So it happened, because people knew that they were drinking "new wine," the fermented product, is favorably mentioned a hundred times where "new wine" is rarely heard. As for "fruit of the vine," which you fondly imagine to support your prohibition, that was a poetic expression for grape wine, in distinction from wine made from currants or other fruits. This poetic "fruit of the vine" is a common word used in the Bible in Greek, but in Latin, in Hebrew, in Aramaic (the language spoken by Christ) and in practically all other Oriental languages. Always and everywhere it means wine, the real thing with an alcoholic content. Such is the literary fact. Whether you believe it or not is of no consequence—unless you value your integrity.

Not only the common use of language, but the law of nature also proves the truth of the matter. New wine is in process of fermentation from the moment it is made, simply because the air and the skins of grapes are filled with yeast spores which are bound to change fruit sugar into alcohol. Palestine had no ice, and no way of preventing fermentation except by boiling, which made a nauseous drink, and which so far as we know, Jews never practice. In that hot climate, fermentation of the pressed grapes got well under way in a few hours. In the coolest cellar filled with yeast spores, it takes barely two days, and within a week it began to have a luscious "kick" in it. Hence the Scriptural injunction not to put newly made wine into old bottles (wineskins) because it would certainly cause the fermentation and burst the container. You can fool yourself, if you will, by pretending that the disciples carried a bag of five grapes and filled with yeast spores with them, so that they could always have "new wine," which they disliked; but don't, please, ever again try to fool anybody else by such nonsense. I say nothing of prohibitionists because I respect those who are intelligent or sincere, and therefore do not like to see their warning cause made ridiculous.

All your other arguments are of the same self-deluding kind. Thus, you say, "Is it likely that Jesus would eat an example of drinking fermented wine?" What is likely or unlikely to our notion has nothing to do with the matter. The simple fact is that he did drink fermented wine. Another fact, which should make you think before damning those who disagree with you, is that uncounted millions of his devoted followers still drink it.

Again you say that Christ refused the proffered wine and myrrh because, forsooth, he objected to wine drinking and wanted to set a good example. In what jungle of ignorance you found this fantastic delusion is to me a mystery. The fact is that, because crucifixion was a brutal and a torturing form of punishment, it was a custom to offer the victim a strong drink, which caused such drowsiness that the senses were numbed and the pain forgotten. Wine was mixed with the drink simply to mitigate the bitter taste of the myrrh, just as whiskey was always given during the Civil War, when the crude drug was so bitter that patients refused to take it straight. I do not know why Christ refused the myrrh nor does any other living soul; but it is possible that, being a brave man, he preferred to keep his senses that he might give hope to the poor thief that died beside him, and cheer the sorrowing woman at the foot of his cross. That is a reasonable explanation, and worthy of a Saviour of men. Your prohibition argument is more gibberish to me than the delusion that I "may get a new vision of the Good Book." Thanks! I like the Good Book well, but I have never delivered me from visions, which commonly lead to fanaticism, and give me reverence for truth. The chief difference between a sane man and a fanatic is that the fanatic is a great fellow for visions. Get rid of them, dear man, and go fishing, and good luck to you. Thine truly,
—Simple Simon.
